The New York Times, through an editing error, incorrectly reported yesterday that the Central Intelligence Agency was under a Justice Department subpoena in early August, 1972, when Richard Helms, then Director of Central Intelligence, ordered the agency to withhold information. The subpoena, ordering the C.I.A. to produce all Watergate communications, was not in effect at the time.

They sought to start a national political movement to reopen official investigation into the slaying of President Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

The researchers, some of whom have spent years tracking minute details, recalled to the conference audiences that they had long worked alone and had been scoffed at for being "crazy."

"People used to say, 'Where's your new evidence,'" said Mark Lane, author of "Rush to Judgment," a book critical of the Warren Commission report on the assassination. "I say they're wrong with the old evidence."

"What's changed in the past 10 years is the political climate," he added. "A Gallup Poll shows 78 per cent of the American people don't believe the Warren Commission. What's changed is the political climate—that we can't convince members of the Congress, members of the Senate," he added.

The Warren Commission, said that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting as a lone demented assassin, shot and killed the President from a sniper's nest. He was gunned down before live television cameras in a police station by Jack Ruby, a strip-

The dramatic high point of the conference was the showing of a "bootleg" copy of what is known as "the Zapruder film." This is an amateur movie made by Abraham Zapruder, a Dallas dressmaker, which is the only known pictorial record of the moment Mr. Kennedy was shot. The film was purchased by Time Inc. and has never been officially released.

In the film, President Kennedy is seen slumping forward in the back seat of the convertible, his hands moving upward toward his neck.

Suddenly, the President's head and the upper part of his body are snapped violently backward. Blood gushes about his face.

The assassination researchers contend that the short back-sight movement shown on the film is at odds with the Warren Commission finding that the President was killed with a single bullet fired from the rear. The conference, sponsored by the Assassination Information Bureau, a group of young people working out of a Cambridge apartment, attracted about 200 people to its program of films, workshops and panel discussions. Many in the predominantly white young crowd held the micro-

What unites the researchers is a strong belief that the Warren Commission report was a "cover-up" that did not tell the truth about the assassination. Questions were also raised about the slayings of Robert F. Kennedy and the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and the assassination on the life of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama. Underlying the questions were various theories of shadowy forces or "infrastructures" within American life, including, but not limited to, the Central Intelligence Agency.

But there were also disagreements over some of the researchers' methods, egos and conclusions. Privately, members of this sponsoring group said that they regarded some of the material as quite shaky, but that they wanted all efforts represented and that the most important point was the questions

Among the more controversial of these self-styled reporters were Mae Brussel, who has a syndicated radio show and writes for The Realist magazine, and Sherman Skolnick, who helped force the resignation of three Illinois judges.

Speaking in a ardent voice, his words tumbling over one another, the California-based speaker described spending eight years on—imprisoned, notably of everyone who ever met Lee Harvey Os-

Mr. Stoltz, who is confined to a wheelchair, contended that the Chicago airplane crash in which the wife of E. Howard Hunt Jr. died had been caused by C.I.A. sabotage. But, he added, a document "which should have been written on asbestos" flattered from the plane, became stuck on a bush and came into his possession. It was, he said, a National Security Council memorandum of Nov. 27, 1960, "three years to the date before," saying that "for the good of the Republic," John F. Kennedy should be re-

Mr. Laue was visibly upset by such charges, and in the closing session today, in the discussions urging new investigations were distributed, warned against reaching conclusions beyond what could be substantiated. "We should not make statements that most reasonable Americans cannot accept," he said. "We cannot require acceptance of the unbelievable. I will set us back 20 years. If their credibility that must be at stake, not ours."
